

Workshop

25-26 November 2024 (Online)

Politics and Ethics of Activist Research

Workshop Content & Program

Activist research and science-based activism lead to both productive collaborations and new problems. In the workshop, we will explore this tension by asking:

- What tensions and forms of cooperation arise from differing and similar values, interests, and priorities?
- How can potentially conflicting priorities and needs be negotiated?
- Is it possible to avoid extractivist approaches of academic-activist research and return research findings to the field?
- Who owns the data generated by scientific research and who has the right to re-use it?
- What are strategies for ethical interaction when scholars work with those living in war-torn and conflicted areas?

To register, please send us a short email to warsensing@europa-uni.de

25. November 14.00-17.00 (CET)

Working at the Intersection: Bellingcat, Open Source Investigations, and Impact in Research

Dr. Giancarlo Fiorella, Director of Research and Training at Bellingcat, assistant professor at the Global Justice Investigations Lab at Utrecht University

Media & Communication Studies for the Common Good: Three Dimensions of Exchange between Academia and Society

Dr. Sevda Can Arslan, Paderborn University

26. November 10.00-13.00 (CET)

Between Extractivism and Collaborative Knowledge Practices: An Activist Research during War

Tasha Lomonosova (ZOiS)

Collective Mapping as a Method of Activist Research

Paul Schweizer (kollektiv orangotango)

Awareness of Biased Knowledge Production

Chris Regn (Who writes his_tory? / Bildwechsel)

CRC 1187 "Media of Cooperation" | University of Siegen, in cooperation with Ruhr-University Bochum and Europe-University Viadrina Frankfurt (Oder) | Project Cycling Media (Julia Bee & Hannah Schmedes) | Project War Sensing (Miglė Bareikytė & Johanna Hiebl)